The Internet protocol suite is the conceptual model and set of communications protocols used on the Internet and similar computer networks. It is commonly known as TCP/IP because the foundational protocols in the suite are the Transmission Control Protocol (TCP) and the Internet Protocol (IP). It is occasionally known as the Department of Defense (DoD) model because the development of the ...

Transmission Control Protocol (TCP) uses a network congestion-avoidance algorithm that includes various aspects of an additive increase/multiplicative decrease (AIMD) scheme, with other schemes such as slow start and congestion window to achieve congestion avoidance. The TCP congestion-avoidance algorithm is the primary basis for congestion control in the Internet.

TCP congestion control - Wikipedia

tcp/ip is a set of protocols that enable devices to communicate over a network. It is based on the Internet Protocol Suite, which is a set of protocols that enable devices to communicate over a network. The TCP congestion control algorithm is a key part of the TCP/IP suite. It is designed to prevent network congestion by adjusting the window size based on network conditions. The algorithm uses an additive increase/multiplicative decrease (AIMD) scheme, which means that the window size is increased by a fixed amount when the network is not congested, and decreased by a multiplicative factor when the network is congested. This helps to maintain a steady state of network traffic and prevent congestion.

Also note, although you will sometimes see mention of RFC 1700 "Assigned Numbers" (dated October 1994) it was long ago obsoleted by the official IANA list. Do not use RFC 1700 as a reference. This fact is now officially documented by RFC 3232 "Assigned Numbers: RFC 1700 is Replaced by an On-line Database".
