Hyperbaric welding is the process of welding at elevated pressures, normally underwater. Hyperbaric welding can either take place wet in the water itself or dry inside a specially constructed positive pressure enclosure and hence a dry environment. It is predominantly referred to as "hyperbaric welding" when used in a dry environment, and "underwater welding" when in a wet environment.

Underwater diving, as a human activity, is the practice of descending below the water's surface to interact with the environment. Immersion in water and exposure to high ambient pressure have physiological effects that limit the depths and duration possible in ambient pressure diving. Humans are not physiologically and anatomically well adapted to the environmental conditions of diving, and ...

Weld-preheating is a hot topic.... It should always be considered, whatever will be finally decided.. It may not be needed in the specific application.. Searching the term "preheating" in this website only, brings more than 60 results.. That means that it is rather a popular argument, cropping up quite frequently.. It is therefore proper to dedicate this separate page to the subject, to ...
